TEMPERANCE AS A BUSINESS ASSET.

Commenting on the fact that one of the great railroad lines has just issued an order that any employee who cashes a pay check in a saloon will be summarily discharged, the Topeka Mail and Breeze says:

It is coming to the point all over the country where men who work for corporations must keep away from the saloon. This isn't because the managers of the roads are cranks on the subject of drink, neither are they of the straight laced order. It is simply a matter of business. Experience has shown that the man who is full of booze is not to be depended upon and the roads simply can't afford to hire him. It is such a selfish proposition entirely and is just another proof that enlightened selfishness is the force that is going to make this old world a better place to live in.

It used to be that the managers didn't seem to think it made much difference how much a man drank just so he was sober enough to go to work in the morning. They have found out now that it makes a heap of difference. The soak, even if he never really gets drunk is less efficient on account of the fact that he is soaked body and brain with whisky. And so it came about the rules against drinking grew stricter and stricter until now it is enough to lose a man his job on some of the biggest roads if he is even seen in a saloon whether he actually drinks or not.

Governor Campbell's popularity with Austin hotel and boarding house keepers is not without good cause.

An Ohio preacher says, kissing is an intoxicant. Will it, then, be included in statewide prohibition? If so defeat of the measure is a foregone conclusion.

Governor Campbell has another use for the grindstone besides holding legislator's noses to it—he can sharpen his veto hatchet on it.

Standard Oil attorneys are trying to make the court and the rest of mankind believe that the Rockefeller aggregation is the light of the world.

A Congressman has introduced a bill to reduce the salary of congressmen and senators back to the old figure, $5,000 a year. Even that is a good deal more than most of them are worth.

Only last year Commissioner Colquitt was loud in asserting his superior claim to proprietorship of the passenger fare reduction issue. Now he has abandoned it to his competitor, Governor Campbell. Colquitt may have seen it first, but Campbell got hold of it and wouldn't let go.

William Jennings Bryan is again in Texas, and there is no abatement of the enthusiasm of the ovations wherever he stops. If the people of Texas had the naming of the president they would choose by an overwhelming majority the man whom, in spite of the jibes of a few petty politicians, they believe to be second to no statesman that ever lived in ability and integrity.

Little Rockdale has sent out a committee of leading citizens to study the construction and operation of interurban lines in Texas. This is the latest of many recent manifestations of the spirit of progress that seems to have taken possession of our neighbor across the Brazos. Such pluck will soon make Rockdale a formidable rival of Bryan.

There have been great men who were not church members and some who were not orthodox believers according to the prevailing standards, but since the dawn of the Christian era there has not lived a truly great man who did not respect Christianity and venerate The Christ. This includes all the great Jews, such as Renan, Strauss and Spinoza.

The Orange Leader tells this fish story: "One of the local ministers went fishing last Saturday and caught so many fish that the next morning his shoulders were numb and sore as a result of the strain on them in pulling in the fish. He told this himself, we know it must be so." If this preacher is equally successful as a "fisher of men" Orange ought to be or to become in a short time, (morally speaking) "a city that is set on a hill" which cannot be hid.

The extent to which Governor Campbell has used the appointive power to boost his own political fortunes is little short of scandalous. Nobody doubts, unless it be some of the beneficiaries of executive favor or their friends, that the governor's object is to build a machine with himself at the head, by means of which he hopes to control the state. And his operations are not confined to the executive department, but he has invaded the legislative, the judiciary, the eleemosynary and penal institutions and even the educational department. If Governor Campbell were an abler man there would be cause for alarm, but, fortunately, his weakness is the people's strength.

In the contest over statewide prohibition in the Missouri legislature some of the honorable members use knock-down arguments—not figuratively either—and sundry broken noses and barked shins were there to show that the arguments were effective. Verily, these are the days of strenuous politics.

Says the Tyler Courier: "The legislature can come home or not just as they please." The Courier ought to know that this is untrue and unjust. The governor has the power to keep the legislature at Austin as long as he pleases. Before he was inaugurated the first time he boasted that he would "hold their noses to the grindstone" and that is just what he is doing. Place the blame, where it belongs.

It has leaked out that the supposed saturnalia festivities of Carrie Nation's fellow passengers on the return voyage from Europe was nothing but a practical joke. Just for fun they pretended to be soused all the time. Carrie would line them up and lecture them while they staggered and leered at her as if they were thoroughly soaked with the liquid she so detests. This was kept up till the last day, when the gang appeared before her sober and feigning penitence thanked her for her advice and promised to profit by it. Even then she failed to catch on, but hugged herself under the delusion that she had really accomplished a great feat in the line of moral reform. They were naughty boys to so impose on the old creature.

The people of Bryan are much gratified to hear of the high place W. S. Howell, Jr., has won for himself in the esteem of the people of San Antonio. No boy reared in Bryan was ever more universally esteemed and the news of his triumphs in the historic metropolis of the west is an article for the Publicity League contest published in the San Antonio Light. It is a blooming eulogy of the Alamo City and we shall be disappointed if it fails to win the prize. We would cheerfully give it a place in the Eagle if it were not that we cannot afford to advertise special interests free of charge. When we consider that Will is yet several years short of attaining his majority it is scarcely enough to say that he has remarkable talent—genius is none too strong a word to apply to him. We are glad that he contemplates making Journalism his life work, for it is safe to predict for him a career at least equal to that of the brilliant Carmack and his sterling moral character assure us that the ending will be less tragic.

OUR HOPE IN THE RESURRECTION.

Not only that our Savior died Upon the cruel tree,
Not only that they pierced His side
Thus made salvation free.

While we believe that this is true
Our faith would be in vain,
No hope there'd be for me and you
Save that He rose again.

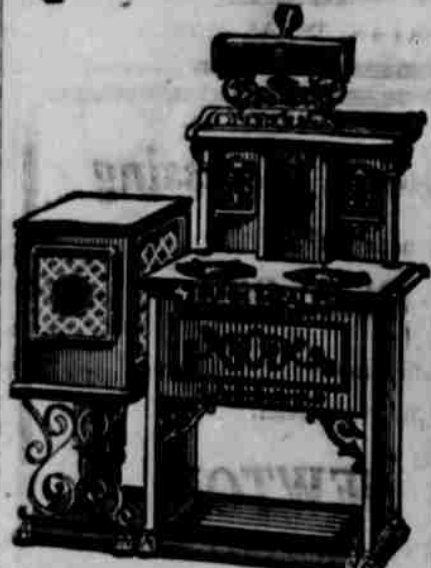

Hope is an anchor to the soul
Our souls, though often dip,
Some day we'll reach the looked-for goal.
If we stay on the ship.

—Joe McGee.
